FATHER AND SON CAUGHT IN ACT MAKING WHISKY

HUNTINGDON, Tenn., March 24. (Sp.)—Sheriff S. G. Aden and posse consisting of Lute Aden and Len Boyd made a raid in the eastern end of the county yesterday morning and just before day captured Dock Hampton in the act of making whisky. The still was in fine operation and Mr. Hampton and his son, George Hampton, were busily engaged at their work. The raiders watched them in operation for some bit before entering their plant. The operators both ran, the elder Hampton was caught, however, but the young man outran the officers and got away.

It was about a 25-gallon still with cap and worm. About 300 gallons of beer, six gallons of singlings and several mashes were destroyed. The still was also destroyed.

Mr. Hampton was brought to Huntingdon and carried before United States Commissioner A. M. Lee who bound him over to the next term of the federal court, fixing his bond at $1,000. He gave bond for his appearance and was released.

The still was found about one and a half miles from Civia and was well located in a big hollow, well suited for the business. The Hamptons are said to be old offenders, but Dock denies owning the still and claims that he had only gone down there to get some beer.

Amusements

"Sunshine"

"'Twas the night before Christmas and all through the house not a soul was stirring."

So recited Richard Carle, who opened at the Lyric Thursday night in "Sunshine," on one occasion when the audience apparently found no excuse to make use of their hands. This interpolation was the result of one occasion which was dull. But why look for dull things in a play. Such is a bad thing to do and especially when the piece lives considerably at times, as does this Spanish musical comedy.

"Sunshine" is billed as a musical comedy. It might be called an operetta. Alexander Johnston has furnished no strikingly distinctive musical number, but the soothing, tuneful strains to be expected in such a setting are present. They are colorful and bright.

It has been some years since Richard Carle visited Memphis. He has not changed. Still the drill, easy-talking and high-spirited, he is not generous in his class. His mannerisms are of Richard Carle alone. His diction is perfect, and above all he is a showman. Lastly, as Richard Skinner, he does more than his allotted amount to save "Sunshine" from the theatrical reds.

With Mr. Carle there are two features that make "Sunshine" enjoyable. Miss Zella Rambeau is one. "The fact that 'Sunshine' is not included in the musical score is the other. One hardly expects to find this perfunctory popular piece in such an offering, but its chances are refreshing.

To Miss Rambeau, playing Santa, goes not only the palm but a whole flock of them. This dainty little soprano was the only singer who Thursday night came anywhere near keeping up with the too loudly pitched efforts of Waddy Hides' orchestra, to the extent of being clearly understood. A winsome bit of crowning glory of the black, so necessary in the portrayal of a senorita. Miss Rambeau stood about evenly with Mr. Carle in carrying "Sunshine."

"Love Is Like This Little Wheel of Mine," as sung by this former Chicago Grand Opera company member, came nearest to developing the feature musical number.

Tuck Murdoch (Detective Car) is a lanky chap with lengthy nether limbs which he can manage in a surprising fashion. His eccentric dance features scored repeatedly. The Juanita Marsons of Miss Christine was satisfying especially when she sang several terpsichorean numbers in the last act. Rosita Mantella as Dolores was plenty enough for the Spanish senora. Harry Hoyland, as Pussfoot Trotter, proved himself not only a master of comic situations, but an excellent foil. Other leads were acceptable.

Girls, some fresh in appearance, some bored looking, others merely mechanical, none of whom can ever hope to be a Mary Garden, abound. At times it may drag, but Richard Carle and Zella Rambeau are worth the time and admission. A performance Friday and Saturday night and a Saturday matinee conclude the engagement.

Loew's Lyceum.

Another dumb act that shows months and months of patient effort and final success is Barnold's Dog and Monkey circus which came to the Lyceum Thursday. This animal turn is distinctive in that only at the finale does the trainer appear, then only to take a bow.

"Dan," the drunken dog, and the monkey roamer who "rushes the can" like a vet of the pre-Volstead days, are amusingly entertaining.

There is an opening clog dance act, Maude Kennedy and Kramer, that is praiseworthy. They show unusual ability in hard shoe steps. This bit is good enough on any bill. Jeff Healy and company have presented "A Business Proposal" here on previous occasions. The sketch, however, is still a laughter. Principals are all good for their roles.

Some good material is properly used by the University Trio. These three boys possess excellent vocal talents. Jim Hilly and Jessie Noble complete the vaudeville with a comedy skit comprised of chatter, dances and a song or so.

Another tear-em up Western screen lead, Buck Jones, arrived Thursday. In "The Last Straw" this former U. S. cavalryman made a large acquaintance on his first showing in Memphis. It is a typical Western film full of action.

Orpheum.

Jean Adair's new playlet, at the Orpheum this week, is a whimsical comedy by Edwin Burke called "Ella Comes to Town." Ella typifies the "homey" lovable old-fashioned, old lady back home, the kind of woman that you kiss good-bye at the garden gate when you go off to the city to make your mark in the world.

In this play Ella comes to town, and the piece tells of her adventures in the city's night life. Not a profound play, of course, but a simple human story which affords an excellent opportunity for light and shade, humor and pathos, the whole pointing a moral that is so perfectly sugar-coated that it is pleasant to take.

Miss Adair in this type of role offers a rare dramatic treat. She ranks among the best character actresses on the American stage. Her work is often compared with Emma Dunn, and Emma Dunn's work is frequently compared with Miss Adair's. They style are very similar.

"On the Firing Line."

Laughs tumble over one another in the comedy "On the Firing Line," in which that universally popular and exceptionally gifted comedienne, Miss May Irwin, will appear at the Lyric on next Tuesday and Wednesday nights and Wednesday matinee.

Miss Irwin, than whom there is no more celebrated or enjoyable player of comedies on the American stage, is starting this season in the cleverest piece and biggest hit she has ever had.

"On the Firing Line" was an enormous success in New York where it ran only recently ended and it was pronounced on all sides one of the brightest and most entertaining comedies produced in years.

SEARCH FOR HOLDUP MEN.

ROANOKE, Va., March 24.—Hands of officers with bloodhounds searched unsuccessfully all night for two unidentified negroes who held up E. M. Coffey, Jr., internal revenue agent, on a street here late last night and shot and severely cut him with a razor when he refused to put up his hands.

The search continues today while Coffey is in a local hospital with chances of recovery regarded as doubtful this morning.

MAY OVERTON DEAD.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., March 24.—May Overton, 65, prominent citizen of Nashville, died here today.

Mr. Overton had been in poor health and several days ago sustained a fracture of the skull by a fall. He was the founder of the old Hermitage Stud here.
